Halton board and unions now ready to discuss social contract deal

Teachers and other unions involved with the public education process in Halton have reached a deal to make a deal.

They are now ready to hammer out details of local social contract agreements with the Halton Board of Education to meet the province's payroll reduction targets.

In a special meeting last week, the board approved a Memorandum of Understanding between with each of six unions it deals with.

The meeting was held hours before the province's deadline that would have imposed mandatory payroll savings on the board had it not been met.

"We should now be able to receive a 20-per cent reduction in the targeted amount," said Sue Currie, superintendent of Employee Services, who answered questions from board members at the meeting.

Reaching a consensus on time means the board's reduction target will probably be shaved to $9.5 million from the $11.9 million target the province had originally stipulated, she said.

Another reduction for teacher groups should further reduce its target.

Because the provincial sectoral framework was put in place only on Aug. 1, the board had only 10 days in which to act on a local level, said Currie.

She said only one-third of the public service sector in Ontario has reached an understanding with its employees to convert subsectoral social contract agreement to local agreements.

Sub-sectoral agreements Just what steps the board and unions will take to reduce the payroll by the determined figure will, to a degree, be based on three-year sub-sectoral agreements reached with the government by other school boards, she said.

Terms of these agreements include wage freezes between June of this year and the end of March, 1996, non-replacement of employees who retire or resign, unpaid personal leaves without replacement of up to two years and the scheduling of unpaid leaves to meet the social contract cash target.

They also allow for a portion of gains on the Teachers Pension Plan, to be used to offset expenditure reduction targets.

Currie said she thinks details of the Halton board's contract should be completed by Sept. 30.

She told board members there is some manoeuvrability within the framework agreement and, outside of it, there is still the opportunity to discuss staffing, compensation and benefits. This is, she said, "an advantage for this board".

Some board members found it difficult keeping abreast of the province's social contract manoeuvres.

Oakville trustee Cheryl Reid noted information seems to be changing every day with no specific regulations coming down as yet.

DENTAL MATERIALS

Charles Goodyear invented a denture base material back in the mid 1800's. This material was called "Vulcanite". Vulcanite is a dark brown, semi-rigid rubber. Since then, denture base materials have come a long way, and vast changes and improvements have been made. Today very modern plastics and acrylics are used.

The artificial teeth on a denture were made from such materials as bone and ivory. Precious metals such as gold and silver were also tried. Even wood was used to make teeth!

Finally, porcelain and plastic teeth have replaced the former materials. We've come a long way since the days of "wooden teeth". Denture technology has been vastly improved for denture wearers, and they are continually discovering new techniques and materials.

Today, more than 5 million Canadian adults are wearing dentures. That's more than one out of every four people in Canada.
