Patrollers attend training session

It takes a lot of care and thoughtfulness for 131 students to give up five days of their summer vacation to learn how to protect the lives of their fellow classmates when school is again open.

These students attended the Hamilton Automobile Club Safety Patrol Officers' Training Camp being held at Ridley College, St. Catharines, August 16-20th.

The Patrol Camp - held annually for the past 29 years by the HAC and participating communities is designed to teach these youngsters to become captains of their patrols so they can take on their duties, fully trained, on the very first day of school.

Twelve Police Officers as well as educators will instruct students on all aspects of traffic safety - from emergency bus evacuation, first aid and how to train their fellow patrollers once back at school.

Its a busy week for the campers. The police officers instruct the patrollers from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and then assist in organized programs from 7 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. each night. Free time is available before dinner for crafts, swimming and organized sports.

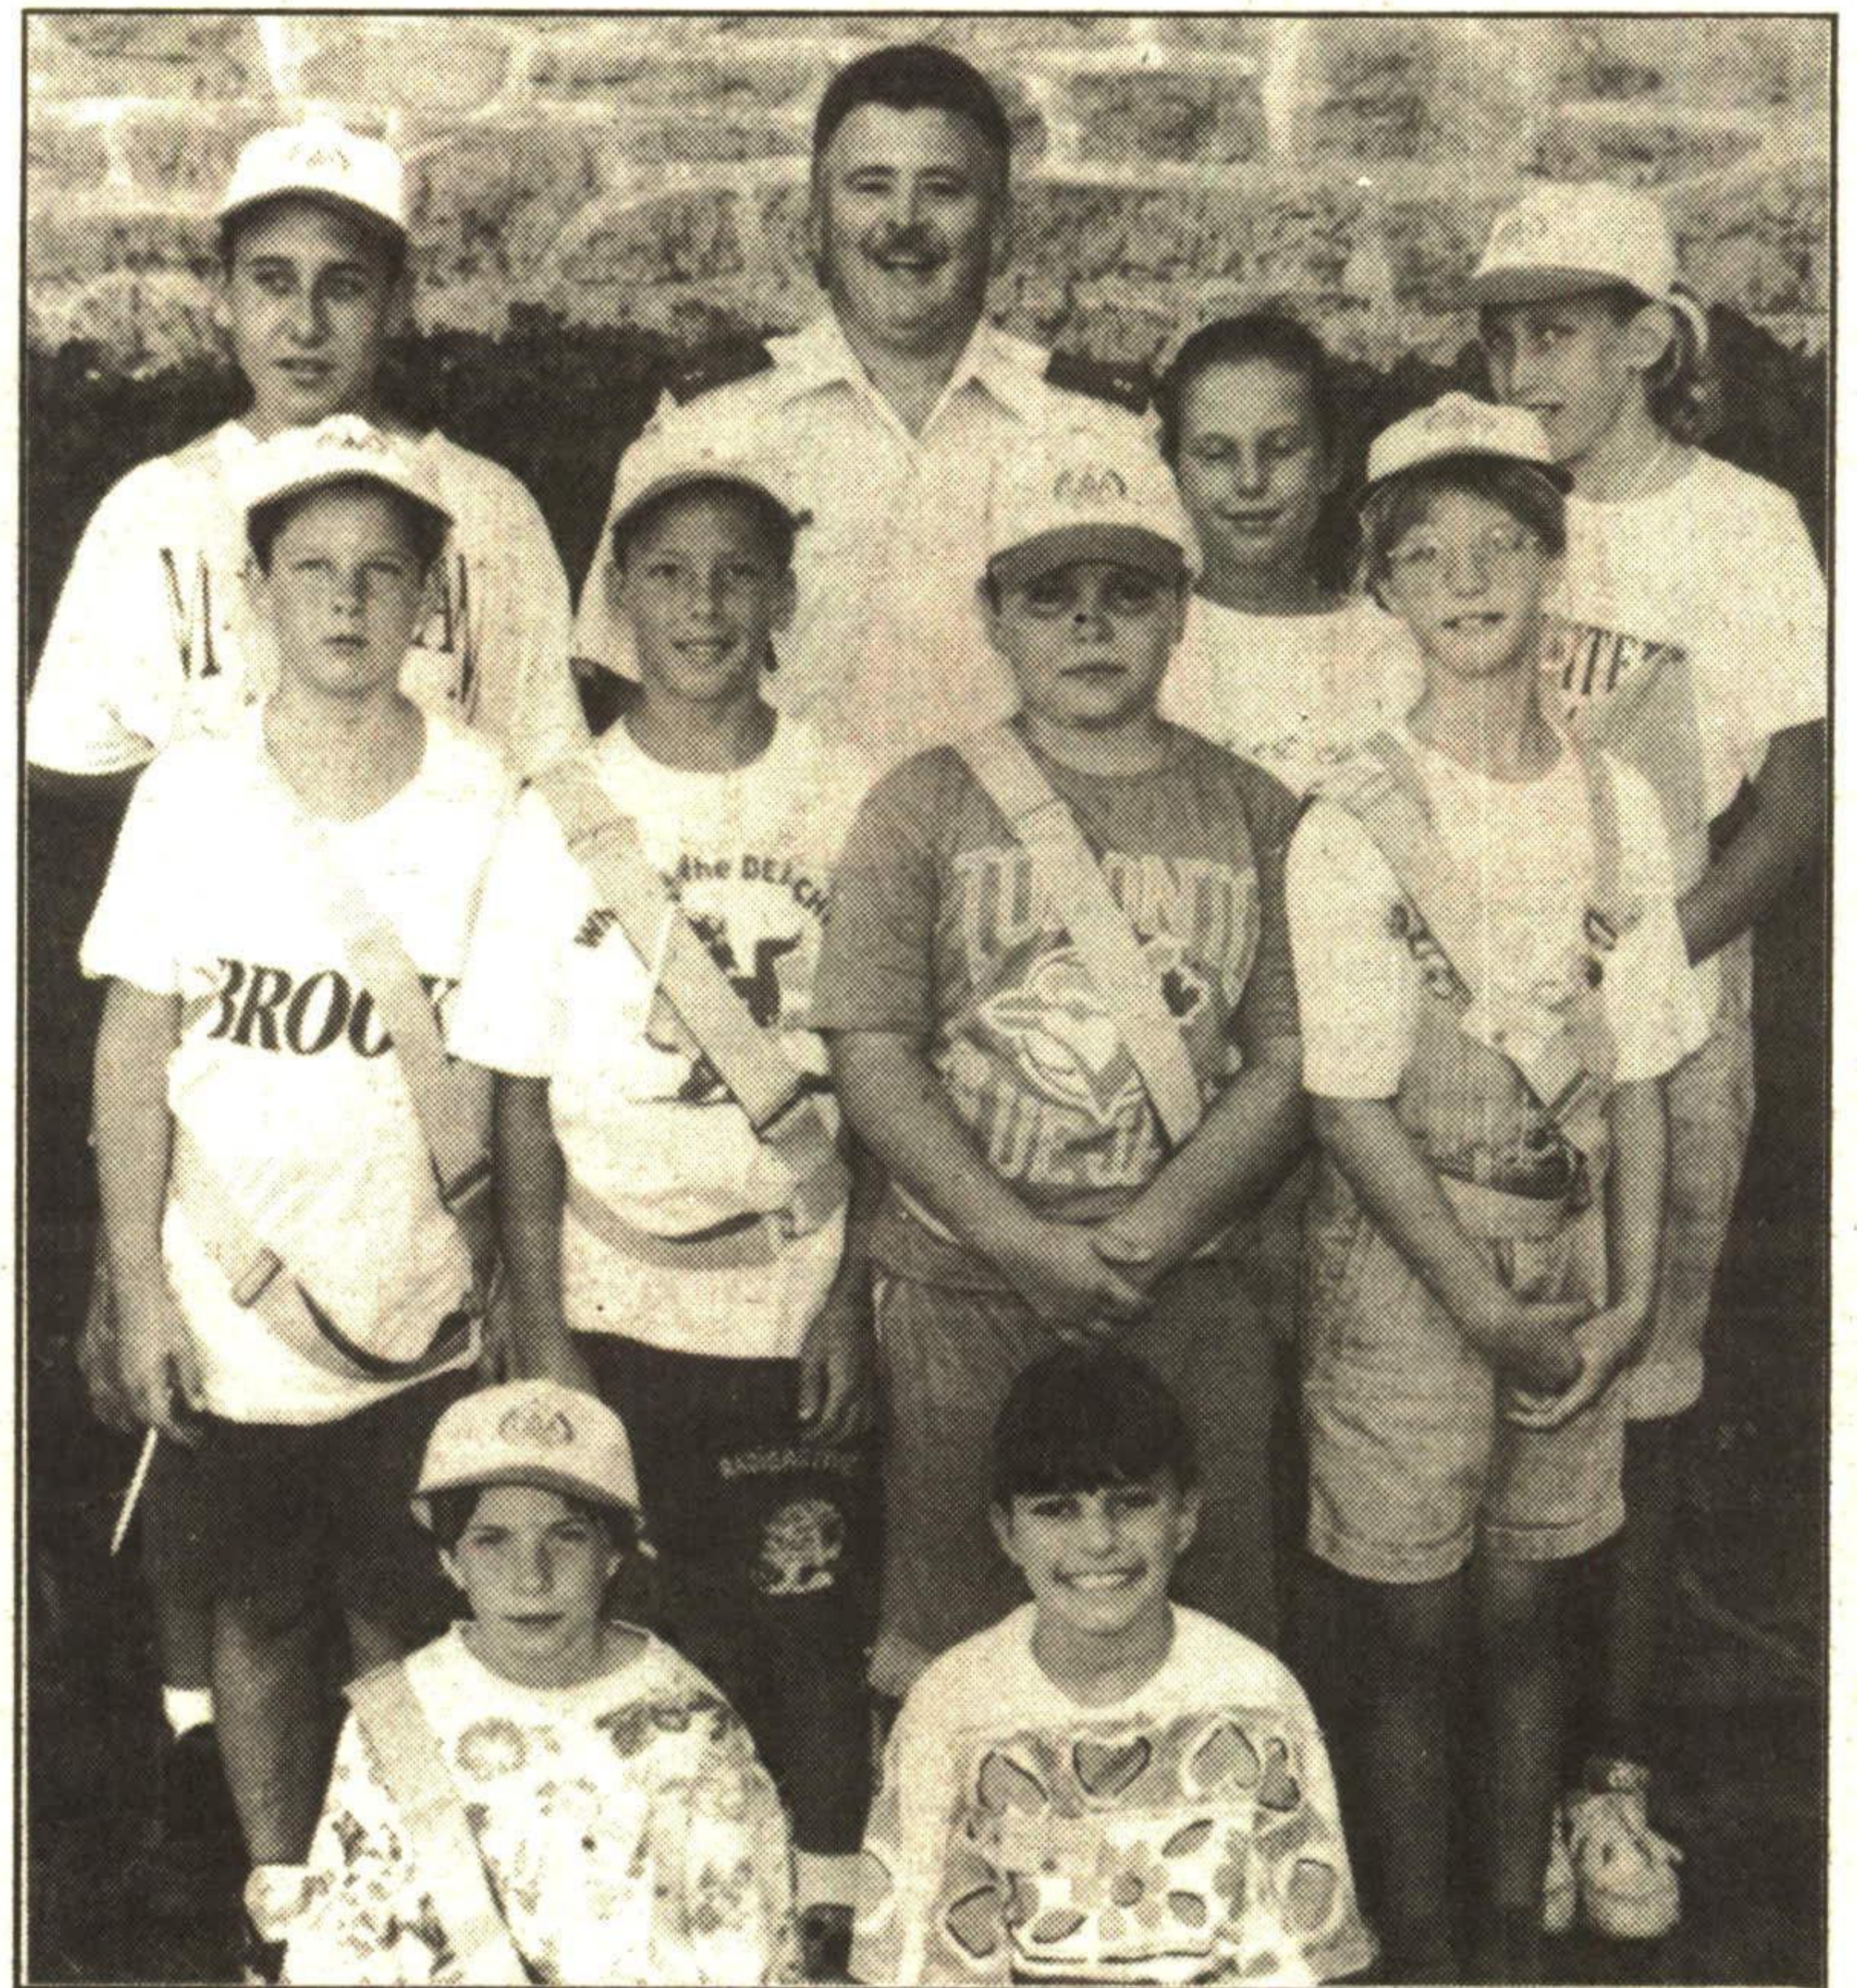

HAC President Richard Congdon says "the purpose of the camp is to provide intense safety instructions to the students, and build a good working relationship with each other for the upcoming school year."

Mr. Congdon commends the students and officers for their devotion to the safety of others.

Since the Patrol Camp started in 1964, the accident rate of students going to and from school during the opening week has greatly decreased. In past years, only minor accidents to a couple of students have been reported.

While taking a break at the Officers Safety Patrol Training Camp at Ridley college, Halton Hills patrollers stop to pose with Halton Police Services Officer Const. Ken Hannah. Front row (from left) are Eleanor Brooks, Lucy Roberto. Middle row, David Mulligan, Terry Sikora, Johnny Schira, Katie Chan. Back row, Ryan Valente, Tara Galeazza and Ashlyn Timukas.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Axford of Georgetown and Mrs. Lorraine Hillier of Georgetown and Mr. William Hillier of Burlington

are pleased to announce the engagement of their children
