Set designer hired for GLT production

By SHIONA WATSON
Special to The Independent/Free Press

For their latest production, The Foreigner, Georgetown Little Theatre has engaged a professional set designer to create a different look for the stage at the John Elliott Theatre.

Doug Robinson initially trained at the Montreal Museum of Art, and the National Theatre School in Montreal, before taking a year's course at the English National Opera Design School in London. He has also had experience working at the CBC in Toronto on Material World and has designed for the O'Keefe Centre.

As part of his job as set designer, Doug has been training Roger Daykin in design. Up till now, Roger has been busily helping to construct most of our sets for the last couple of years, and it will be exciting to have another member of GLT to design sets.

Doug and Roger bring great enthusiasm and imagination to the set for this show which runs Oct 22, 23, 27-30 at the JET (Church Street, Georgetown) If you would like to get a look at the result of all this hard work, tickets are $8 Wednesday, Thursday, and $10 on Fridays, Saturdays and are on sale at the box office Tuesdays and Thursdays 4-8 at the Cultural Centre or call 877-3700.

Poetry published

Carlos Roberto of Raylawn Cres, Georgetown has just had original poetry published in A Break In the Clouds, a treasury of poetry compiled by The National Library of Poetry. The poem is entitled The Drunk, and the main subject is loneliness.

Carlos Roberto has been writing for 10 years and his favorite subjects and ideas are peace, family, the past and the future.

The National Library of Poetry sponsors contests that are open to the public.

Georgetown artist Linda Donais won the MP's Choice Award at the Nassagaweya Art Show and Sale recently. Her painting, Wild Dogwood, was selected for the prize.
