Amnesty Coffee House features local artists

By JANET DUVAL

Special to The Independent/Free Press

Sting won't be appearing at the Amnesty International Coffee House in Georgetown on Saturday, November 20.

But you can hear One World, the song he likes to sing at Amnesty International benefit concerts, performed by local artists Steve Ruggle, Mike Whaling, and Dave Haffey.

The trio have been friends since their days at Georgetown and District High School. They still get together to play music from the Beatles, Rolling Stones, the Tragically Hip, and Sting. "We record ourselves too" says Ruggle. "It's a fun thing for us."

Once again, the local Amnesty International group hopes to pack the hall at St. John's United Church, 11 Guelph Street, for its annual fundraising evening beginning at 7:30 p.m. on November 20.

As usual, there will be a mix of local talent, soothing the ear with a range of music from folk and country to a touch of classical and maybe some jazz, all coordinated by Amnesty International group member Jim Broughton.

Broughton has lined up guitarist extraordinaire Brent Cooper, and accomplished local musician Haydn

Evans, who says he'll add some Gershwin piano stylings to a repertoire of classical and pop favorites.

The Glen Williams trio Janice Giddings, Phil Lewin, and Kent Neame promise some Jazzy blues, and Broughton himself will be the evening's singing emcee, featuring songs of Stan Rogers and Gordon Lightfoot. Broughton points out that you never know who else might show up to perform.

While you relax and soak up the atmosphere, you can enjoy specialty teas and coffees, cheesecake, muffins, and other dessert surprises offered by Amnesty group members.

Amnesty International Christmas cards will be on sale, and you can help the group's human rights efforts by signing letters supporting the release of "prisoners of conscience" around the world, people imprisoned solely because of their race, religion, color, or political beliefs, who have never used nor advocated violence.

Presently much of the group's work centres on a young Cuban civil engineer, jailed for 10 years on charges of "enemy propaganda", for speaking against Castro's Communist regime.

Admission is $4 at the door for adults, $2 for students and seniors.

Principals make donation

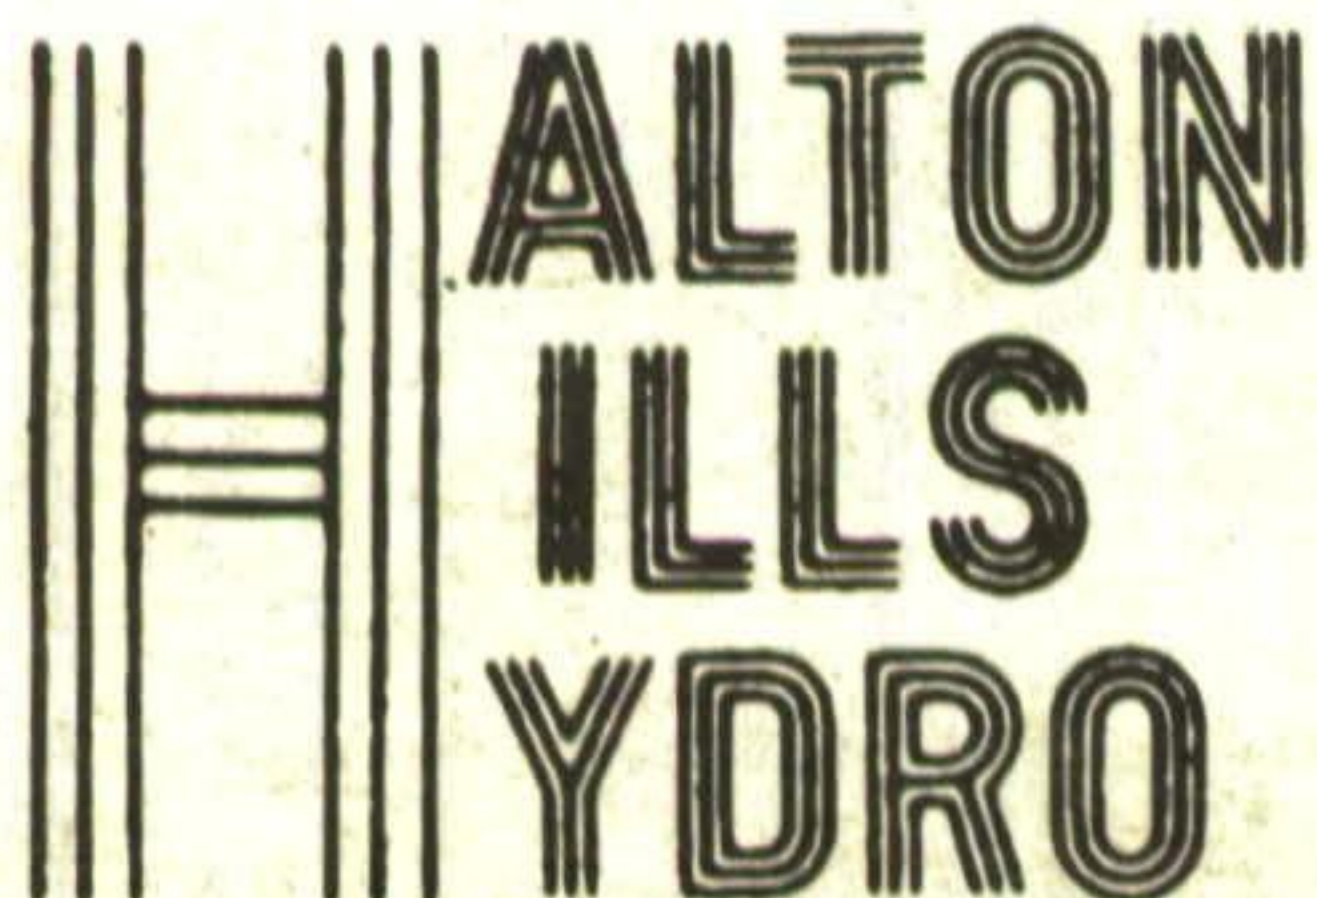

The Halton Elementary Principals' Association (HEPA), composed of the elementary principals in the Halton Board of Education, are giving $2,410 to help two Halton community service groups. On November 25, the principals will present $1,205 to Halton Women's Place and $1,205 to DARE-Halton (Drug Abuse Resistance Education).

The money was raised through activities at HEPA professional development sessions. Notes Peggy Harcourt, HEPA president and principal of Rolling Meadows Public School in Burlington, "Raising needed funds for our community has been longtime activity for our group, above and beyond the work we do for the United Way. Our members believe it is important to reach out and assist the agencies that help the students we serve, their families, friends and neighbors. To us, it's just a part of being a responsible part of our community."
