St. Joe's students get extra holiday

On the warmest, sunniest day of the year when spring finally seemed to have arrived in full force, St. Joseph School closed Wednesday and the 383 students have a faulty sump pump to thank for the free day.

Principal Robert Maggio said they noticed the problem Tuesday afternoon when the toilets at the school kept backing up and the sewage system stopped functioning. The principal decided at 5 p.m.

on Tuesday that the school would have to remain closed for the day Wednesday. The electrical wiring to the sump pump had to be fixed so the washrooms would function properly.

Parents were informed of the closure through the phone tree.

All the kids were back in school Thursday. Maggio said there will be no repercussions for the 383 students at the school for missing the day.

Office moving to Georgetown

The shutdown of the Milton Canadian Cancer Society office has been postponed until August.

The new facility in Georgetown won't be ready for occupancy until then, says Carol Kerr, a longtime volunteer with the organization.

The office at 751 Main St. E, Milton will close July 31 and move to Georgetown, where a new central facility for the organization's Milton and Halton Hills units will open.

Volunteers were outraged when Cancer Society officials announced the restructuring last fall.

The Milton office, which serves as a base for 40 workers, has become a convenience for the volunteers, who worked out of their homes before it opened in the mid-1980s.

Kerr said a plan is being worked out so patient services won't suffer. New locations will be found for meetings, as well as to collect patients and receive donations.

The six-month extension, allows volunteers to use the office for their April fundraising campaign, added Kerr.
