THE BAHA'I FAITH FROM A-Z

SCIENCE

Science is more a matter of the mind; religion, more a matter of the heart. But both are indispensible, examining a single reality from different viewpoints. Science without religion is materialism; religion without science, superstition. Sponsored by the Baha'is of Halton Hills, 878-6138

ALEX TRENTON DENTURIST

EATING WITH DENTURES

It will take practice to learn to eat a fairly normal diet if you wear dentures. Especially during the first few days of receiving new teeth, it is a good idea to eat a soft diet. This will allow the elimination of potential sore spot, with a minimum of discomfort, and will also make the learning period more tolerable. You should also avoid tough, hard, and sticky foods. Although some experienced denture wearers can eat a normal diet including apples, salad, and corn on the cob, this is probably the exception rather than the rule. Most people who have dentures will find some restrictions in the foods they can manage.

Some points to remember regarding eating and chewing habits, is to eat slowly and try to cut your food into smaller pieces. Extra chewing is required with dentures. In fact it will usually take a denture wearer twice as long to chew food, as it would a person with natural teeth. Also, you should try to chew vertically (up and down) rather than horizontally (side to side). If you have to bite using your front teeth, try spreading your tongue against the back of the upper denture to keep it in place. Although the normal tendency is to chew on either one side or the other, denture wearers should try chewing food on both sides, over the back teeth, at the same time. This helps to prevent tipping of the denture
