WHITE GRUBS - THEY'RE BACK

Have you noticed any brown or dead patches in your lawn? Or maybe a few areas that look like someone (or something) has been digging up all of your grass? Well if you have any of these symptoms, you may have WHITE GRUBS. These grubs are the larvae of June Beetles and European Chafers. Beetles lay eggs which hatch in summer. Damage is very noticeable in fall, especially when skunks, raccoons and moles dig up the lawn to feed on the grubs.

In the dead patches, the weakly rooted sod can be pulled back to reveal the fat, white, C-shaped grubs. They have a brown head and three large pairs of legs. White Grub damage can be stopped with a precise application of recommended insect control material. Ideally, the application should be applied in late summer or early fall, when the grubs are smallest and most susceptible. If the grubs are not controlled in the autumn, they will continue feeding on the grass roots in the spring. Therefore a spring application will be necessary.
