

GDHS students stage mall fashion show

Local stores help out

Four GDHS (Georgetown District High School) students, Amanda Webster, Michelle Fotheringham, Angela Coulson and Sarah Campbell, ran their fashion show in the mall on October 31.

The show was an independent study project which all the Administrative Study students must complete as part of their overall mark. It had to be a community involved event and this group chose to do a fashion show in the mall.

Clothing stores such as Crazy Lee's, Reitman's and Zellers took part in the event, a DJ was hired to play the music while fellow high school students walked the runway.

There was an incredible crowd surrounding the presentation while photographers snapped as many pictures as they could of their favorite models. There were dancers, strutters and young rappers walking the runway, showing off their stuff.

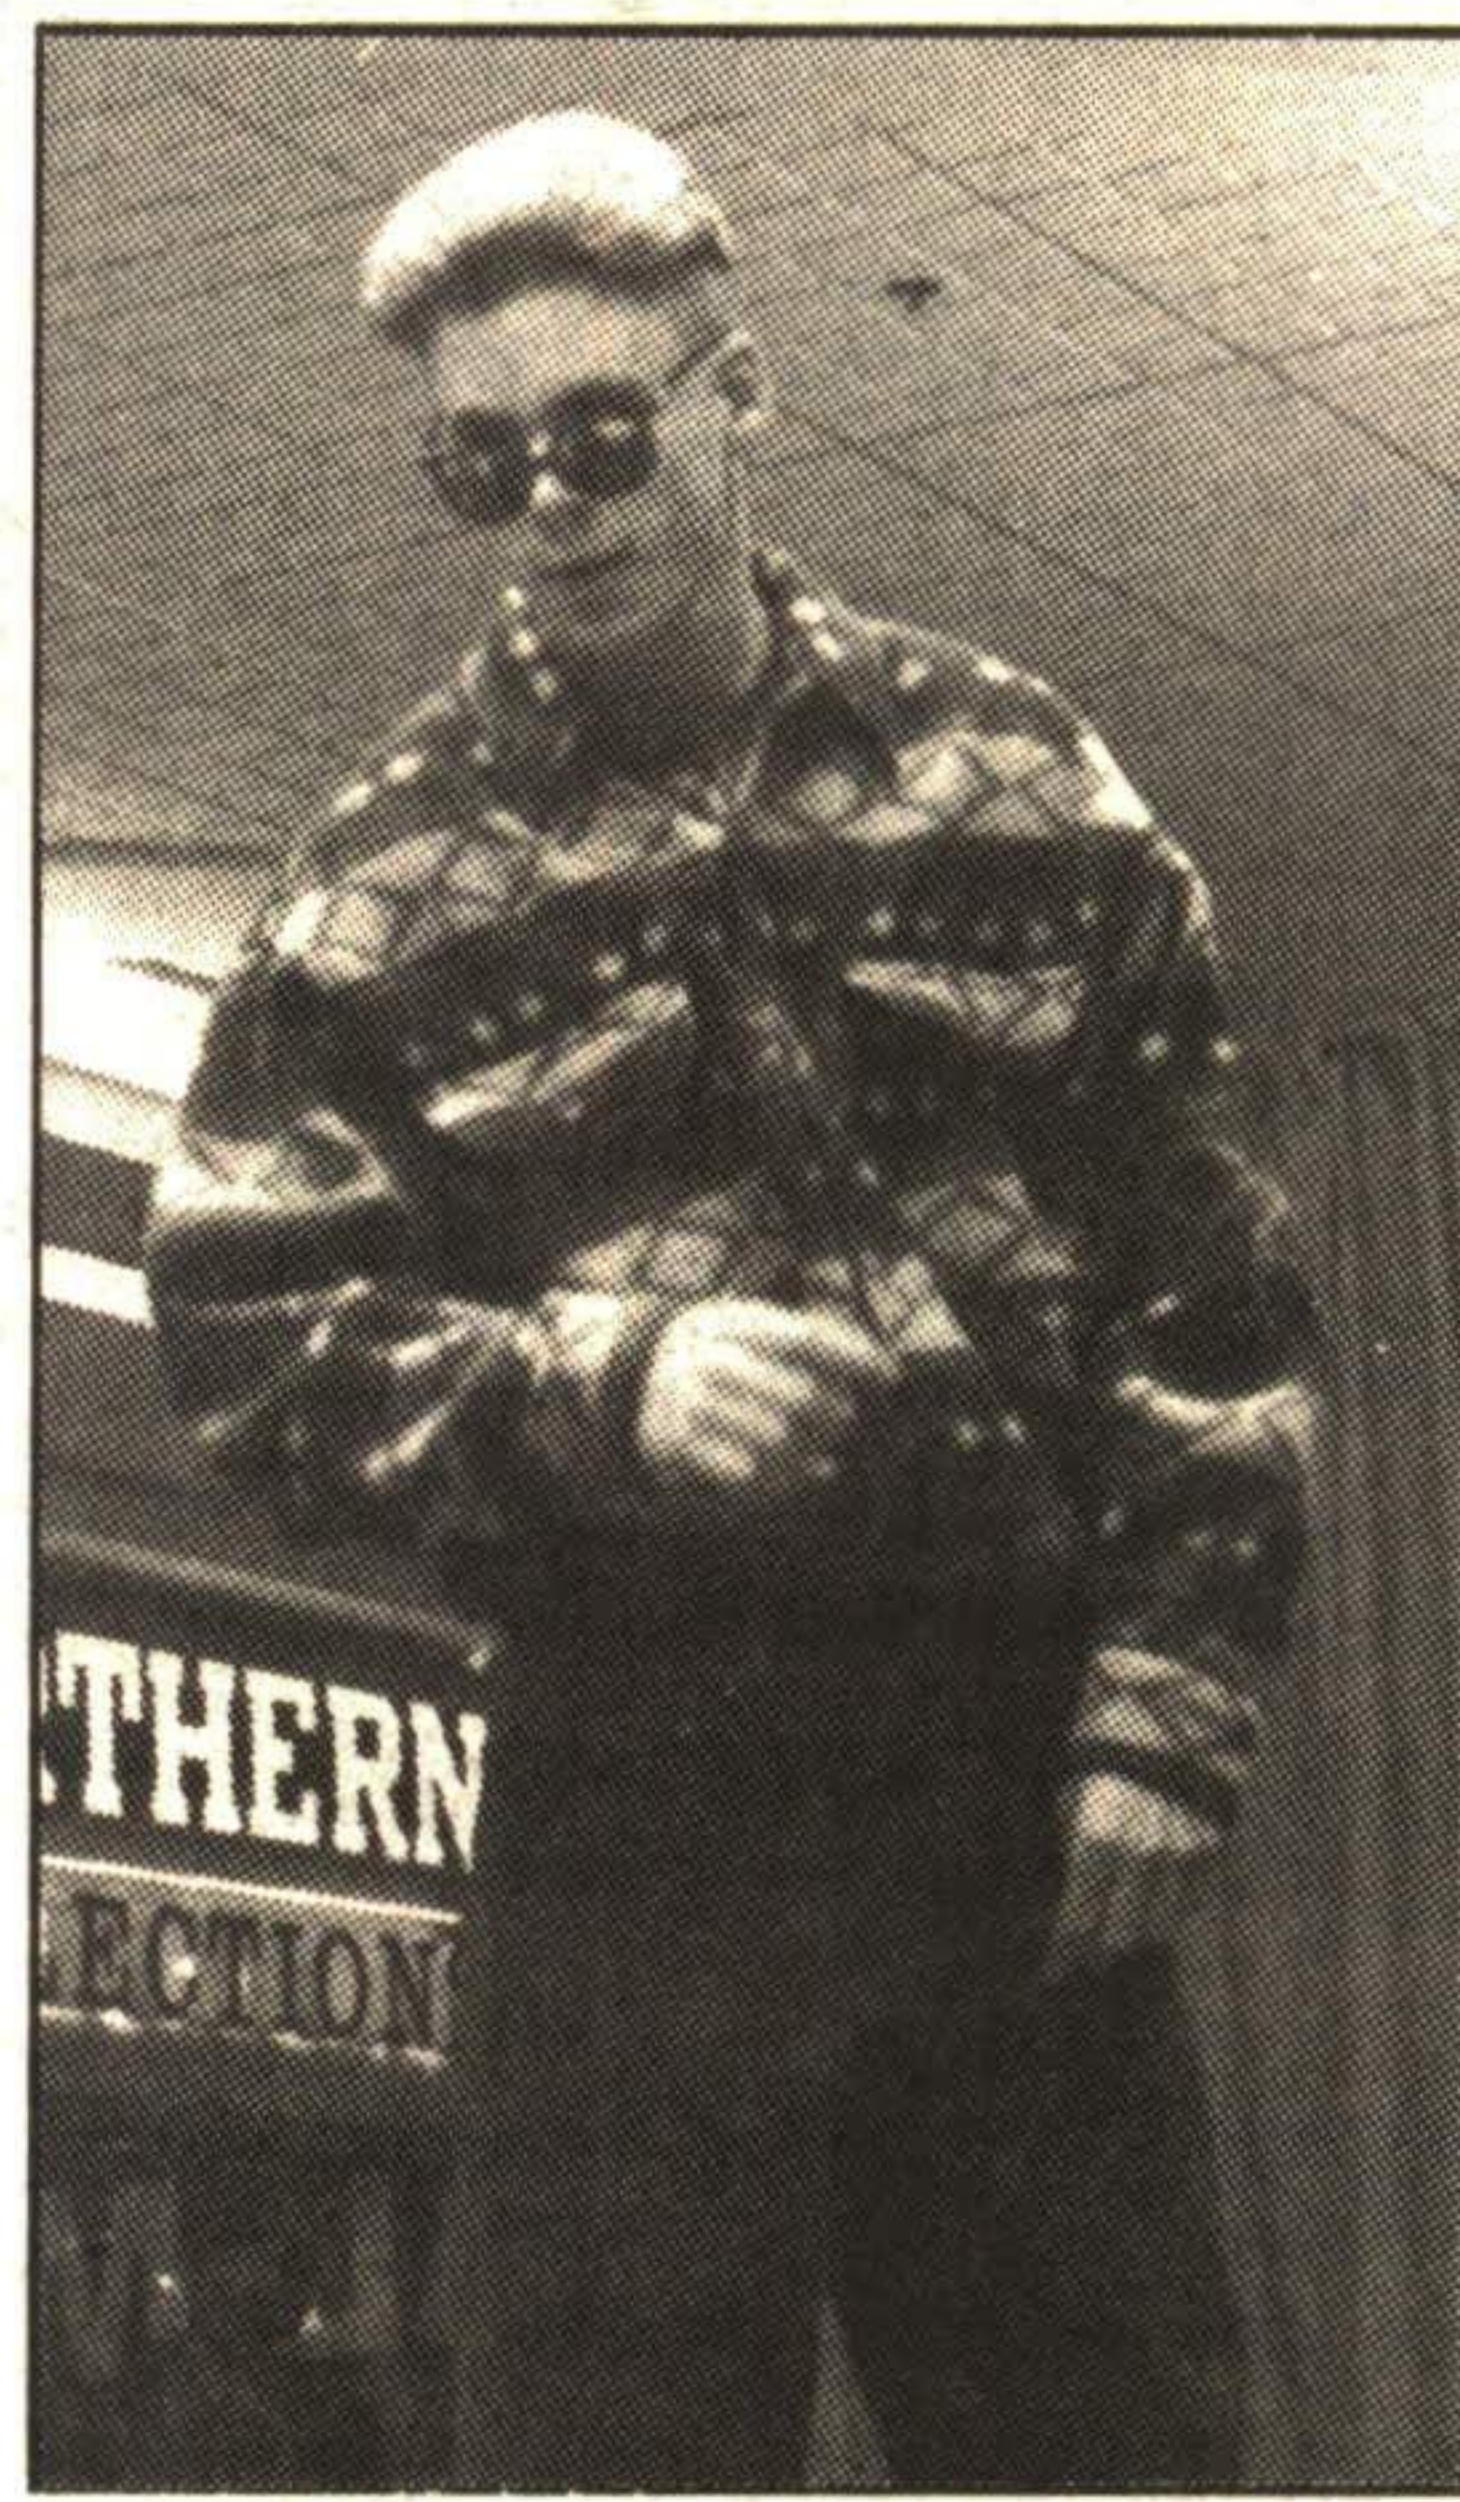

After about 45 minutes the show ended with all the models and organizers posing on stage while the audience gave a big round of applause.

"I didn't think anyone would come," said Michelle Fotheringham, one of the organizers, "but look at all the people." Clearly, the show was a success.

Thank You

Fascinating fashions
