Citizen COPPs to patrol Halton Hills neighborhoods

By LISA TALLYN
Staff Writer

Beginning next month there will be several extra pairs of eyes on the lookout for suspicious activity in Halton Hills.

Halton police will launch Communities on Phone Patrol Program (COPP) in Halton Hills and Milton in November, and Oakville and Burlington early next year. The program, through the use of volunteers on the lookout for anything suspicious, is to help curb vandalism, break and enters and other crimes. It is a joint effort between police and interested citizens.

Members of COPP will patrol areas targeted by police in cars and trucks. If they see any suspicious activities they will call and report them on cellular phones issued by police.

COPP members will not get directly involved in any situations, but will observe and report, and notify police of anything requiring immediate attention. They will also report suspicious people and vehicles they spot in their patrol areas, and file a duty report with police.

Prior to going on patrol all COPP members will be trained on personal safety and how to keep proper notes. They will also receive ongoing training to ensure the program maintains a high standard.

Inspector Keith Gregory said the Halton program is based on a similar program that has been run in Waterloo successfully.

Anyone interested in volunteering for the program—they must have a driver's licence and a vehicle—should call Cst. Doug Williamson or Doug Magwood at 878-5511 ext. 2101.
