HHCS opens new playground activity to public

Students at Halton Hills Christian School had a popular new activity in their playground for the final two weeks of the 2015-16 school year that is open for use by the local community.

As part of the school's 50th anniversary celebrations, members of the Grade 5 classes were challenged to come up an idea and design an outdoor version Snakes & Ladders that could be constructed on the playground as a project-based learning experience.

The project began in April and required the support of a number of Halton Hills contractors to create a 3-D Mayhem 16x16-foot multi-level board game called Rocks & Rungs.

Throughout the process, the students voted on various project decisions and game features that they intend to leave as a legacy to the residents of Halton Hills. CDM Concrete was called on to bring the idea to fruition for its grand opening on June 14.

This isn't just something for the students here, we welcome the community to come over and try it out, said Tisny Braam, HHCS's Development Director.

We are so thankful to celebrate our 50th anniversary here and this is our way of giving back to the community.

Instead of dice used in Snakes & Ladders board games to determine player movements, metal spinners have been mounted at various points on the pyramid-like structure and several students can play at the same time.
