Art Effects meets tonight

The artwork of Albania native Ylli Haruni will be on display at the Art Effects Gallery in Georgetown through the month of August and he'll host a meet and greet in the studio on Thursday, July 28 from 7-9 p.m.

Haruni, a graduate of the Fine Arts of Tirana, has shown his work at the National Art Gallery of Albania and at many shows throughout North America.

A few Georgetown and Glen Williams residents have likely seen Haruni set up his easel at various locales.

As well as his recently completed local art, Haruni will display portraits, still life and European scenes.

Art Effects is located in the Knolcrest Centre at 360 Guelph St.

New show coming to Williams Mill

Williams Mill is taking a fresh new approach to summer.

New work by selected artists will change regularly to celebrate the long hot days of summer. Antonina Gladkova's vibrant, colourful floral paintings are rich with light, texture and movement.

Lynda Pogue's broad range of work encompasses paintings demonstrating exciting and dramatic water-like movement, a Dream Pouch© inspired by soft native spirituality and a captured image of nature at rest.

Karen Silverstone creates soft pencil drawings of landscapes on lathe and plaster; beautiful work that is charming, ethereal and recycled.

Susan Wakefield's painting subjects are diverse yet share a common gentle approach to her subject. Stephen Foreman's stone sculptures are inspired by his materials; alabaster, soapstone and serpentine, then sculpted intuitively for a meditative, healing and beautiful work.

The artists are invited to replace work as it sells in the show, resulting in an ever changing exhibit over the summer months.

Visit the show to see and buy work by high quality artists in our community. Show opens July 27, Gallery open Wednesday-Sunday 12-5 p.m.
