Laugh local at GLIC's 8th annual End-of-Summer shows

What is GLIC? It stands for the Georgetown Little Improv Club, a group of enthusiasts who have been performing the fine art of improvisational theatre for more than eight years. Consistently delivering improv comedy gold, members are united by a common love of improv.

But what is improv? Everything is made-up on the spot and there is no script. Performers ask for an audience suggestion to start, and then weave comedy from the slimmest of ideas.

Audiences love improv comedy because they just don't know what to expect. Without planning, performers launch into characters and scenarios that are created in real-time with no prep.

What audiences are saying about GLIC

I was so involved with what was happening onstage, the time just flew by. My sides hurt because I laughed so much, and was disappointed when it was over. They really left me wanting more. Looking forward to next time!

As I watch GLIC perform, I can feel how much they really like each other. They aren't a bunch of individuals but a real team that trusts and supports one another.

Improv isn't just for comedians. People join for the support and camaraderie that makes a comedy troupe work so well. The number one rule is to make your scene partner look good. And if everyone is working hard to make everyone else look good, then that's good for the audience.

Shows are family friendly, but seating is limited. Tickets are $10 and shows take place at the GLT Studio, 33 Stewarttown Rd. Plan ahead and reserve your seats by calling 905-877-3422.
