High-tech eye care

DRY EYE EXAM: Dr. Joel Schaefer, optometrist and owner of Modern Eyes Optometry, uses meibography, a specialized instrument with infrared light, to image the structure and function of the meibomian glands on Trisha Mackenzie, a patient from Georgetown. The results are used to evaluate meibomian gland dysfunction, the leading cause of dry eye disease, and help formulate a personalized treatment plan. Dry eye symptoms, often confused with allergies, may include: redness, irritation (burn, grit, itch), watering, intermittent blur, light sensitivity and contact lens discomfort. Modern Eyes Optometry, a new facility in Georgetown South, offers comprehensive eye exams, advanced treatment plans and personalized eyewear solutions for all ages. Optometrists, Dr. Joel Schaefer and Dr. Bruce Foley, have served the eye care needs of Georgetown and surrounding communities for over 45 years combined. For more information, visit their new location or call us at 905-873-2077.
