Seniors residence coming to town

By Nelia Raposo

Rockport Group is one step closer to getting shovels in the ground for its seven-storey seniors residence on the site of the former Holy Cross church lands on Maple Ave. in Georgetown after council approved a bylaw that removes the site's holding provision this week.

This means the developers may soon get a building permit.

The proposed 147-suite building in downtown Georgetown was first floated two years ago. Originally it was going to be a six-storey, 120-suite facility.

Council approved a bylaw that removes the holding provision on the property at the site of the former Holy Cross Catholic Church on Monday night (Aug. 29).

The holding provision refers to a zoning by-law that restricts development of properties with a holding symbol until conditions for removing the H-symbol are met.
