Two sepia-toned postcards depicting Acton's Mill Street and the Town Hall, circa 1923, speak to old school communications – pen and ink and two-cent postage stamps.

The postcards, printed by the Helio-type Company in Ottawa, were sent to her two aunts in Guelph. In one, Grace Hood wrote that Acton is larger than she thought and that there are some "pretty places here." In the other, she said that the Radial Railway station was quite near her boarding house and that if her aunt drove by, she could "almost see you from by back window."

Acton resident Kathy Toth, who plans to give the postcard depicting the Town Hall on Willow Street to Heritage Acton, said the slice of early Acton history survived "thanks to hoarders."
