

DEATHS

Heagle Julianne W.

Julianne W. Heagle (nee Christie) died peacefully on September 25, 2011 at the age of 66, after a courageous battle with lung cancer. Daughter to Herbert Christie and Dorothy (nee Donald) of Niagara. Loving wife of 43 years to Gerald Robert Heagle. Julie will be greatly missed by her sons Robert(Christine) and Eric(Alison) and her brother James Christie and wife Susan. Predeceased by brother William (Bill) Christie and sister Faith Ardron. Julie was a devoted Nana to Rachel, Keira, Jackson, Claire, Emma, Katie, and Brook. A private family memorial took place on October 1st. Donations to support the Grand River Regional Cancer Centre through the Grand River Hospital Foundation in lieu of flowers <http://www.grhf.org/>

Donna Marie Teal (Pyle)
March 1, 1950

Tragically was taken from us on Saturday, October 8th, 2011. Loving mother to Robert Teal. Mother-in-law to Dawn (Case) Teal. Grandmother to Damian, age 4 and Eden, age 2. Daughter of Veleta and Ed Pyle (Deceased). Sister of Laurie (Deceased), Allan and Bonnie Pyle. Employee of Upper Canada College Norval Campus for 17 years. Two years ago Donna battled cancer and had successfully been in remission since. Following her wishes no formal funeral will take place. Friends and family are welcome to attend a casual celebration of life on Friday October 14th in Acton at the Royal Canadian Legion, 15 Wright Ave. from 3pm-7pm

Avoid Charity scams

For every charitable donor out there, it seems there's at least five people looking to take advantage. Scammers often prey on the good nature of charitable individuals, particularly by tugging at their heartstrings to donate to charities around the holiday season. Charity scams are in abundance this time of year. It can take an eagle eye to steer clear of bogus charity endeavours. Here are some tips:

1. Big disasters: Scammers love to prey on people after hurricanes or other weather events that get media attention. Don't give money to anyone who hasn't been thoroughly researched.
2. Heartache letters: E-mail scams are on the rise. Many people have received messages stating that Mr. So and So needs money to be wired to get a family inheritance, trust or some other large monetary fund, which will then be shared with those who helped secure the funds. Once a check is sent or money is wired into an account, that's the last correspondence.
3. Sound alike companies: Many charities play off of the public image of well-known charities by naming their bogus charity very similarly. For example, those familiar with the Make a Wish Foundation may find a charity solicitation from Wishmakers Foundation. Without thinking, a donation could be made to the wrong charity.
4. Avoid cash gifts: If a charity requests cash or a person approaches on the street or door-to-door, it's best to skip this sort of donation. Cash donations cannot be tracked. Reputable charities will take personal checks and issue a receipt.
5. Don't fall for hard sells: If a person calling or soliciting for donations is overly forward or provides a hard sell, don't think about donating. Charitable donations are voluntary and should not be received by peer pressure.
