

FELINE FEELIN FINE: The Boere family of Georgetown owns a little Santa's helper that has probably seen enough Christmases to not get too excited about St. Nick's arrival. At age 24 and weighing in at just five pounds, Cinnamon is still going strong.

Is Cinnamon the oldest-living cat in Halton Hills?

Cinnamon the cat celebrated her 24th Christmas this past weekend and scratch on wood this won't be the last for the runt of the litter.

Owner Nick Boere of Georgetown said the family got her as a kitten in the spring of 1992, and amazingly, Cinnamon has yet to visit a veterinarian, aside from her initial shots.

The five-pound calico loves soft cat food and is apparently still quite active, easily negotiating stairs.

With an average life span of 15 years, Cinnamon continues to defy Father Time, jumping up onto the couch for naps and occasionally venturing outdoors, Boere said.

The family is curious to know if she is in fact the oldest-living cat in Halton Hills.

According to a number of cat age calculators, Cinnamon is estimated to be about 112 in human years.
