Celebrate the new year with classic shrimp

By Lori Gysel & Gerry Kentner

What's Cookin

Now those are what I d call shrimp! I am a shrimp lover most of the family is.

However, as per usual, I m a bit of a food snob. If you re going to have a really spectacular shrimp cocktail, you need big shrimp. Shrimpy-sized shrimp just won t do. The size of shrimp should be noted on the package based on the number of shrimp per pound.

For example, you may purchase 31-40 s. That means there are somewhere between 31 to 40 shrimp per pound. So, the smaller the number, the bigger the shrimp. If you buy 8-12 s, that means there are only 8 to 12 shrimp per pound. Now that s a shrimp!

The only confusing thing is that you have to be a little careful about the labeling on the package. Sometimes you may purchase a package that says 21-30 s, so you are thinking that there are 21-30 shrimp in the package.

Well, that means there are 21-30 per pound, but the package may not be a pound of shrimp, it may weigh more or less. So be careful that you are getting what you thought you were getting.

Shrimp are best thawed in the fridge overnight. Leave them in the package in a bowl to catch any potential drips. Peel if necessary, then rinse and pat dry.

The cocktail sauce is so simple and I m sure you have the ingredients in the house already! This makes a really special New Year s Eve appetizer.

Gerry and I were just told that the Independent is making some changes and that our column will be coming to you only once per month starting in January. So, when you don t see us next week, that s why.

But keep watching, we ll be cooking up some tasty recipes for you and I m sure we ll quickly settle into which week of the month to look for us. Until then, from Gerry and I (Lori), please have a safe and Happy New Year and keep cooking!

Cocktail Sauce

INGREDIENTS

- 1 cup ketchup
- One half - 2 tsp hot horseradish
- Squeeze lemon juice
- Dash Worcestershire sauce
- Dash Tabasco sauce

METHOD

Mix all of the ingredients together well. Taste for heat, add more Tabasco sauce if necessary.
