Three days left for public input on Prospect Park waterfront project

Residents of Halton Hills have until Jan. 14 to tell the town how they'd like to see monies spent for a fast-approaching waterfront revitalization project on the dock at Prospect Park in Acton.

We are interested in knowing the who, what, where, when, why and how regarding the current use of this dock, and what you would like to see in the future, writes the town on its website.

In order to facilitate public input, the town has created an online survey for residents to fill out. Council approved funding for the $60,000 project last year and officials are looking for suggestions with the following objectives in mind:

- Provide universal accessibility
- Improve user experience
- Promote ecology/sustainability
- Enhance usage of fairy lake
- Reduce operational/maintenance costs

• Reinforce long-term vision for park
 We've provided our concept of what we think is best, from a staff point of view in consultation with some of the stakeholders, but we don't really know how everybody uses the waterfront, said Mark Taylor, a landscape architect with town in charge of the public consultation.

The town also notes "the size of the existing dock, local ecology and budget for the project will limit scale and material choices which may be incorporated into the final design.

According to Taylor, the town hopes to complete the project in the spring and have it ready to go for the summer season. Although, he notes some work may extend into the first part of the summer.
