

See the cars of the future

Every year, auto shows around the world showcase some of the forward-thinking designs and technologies coming from auto manufacturers. The 2017 Canadian International AutoShow in Toronto is no different.

A number of automakers will be showing off some bold designs this year that might just offer a glimpse into what cars we'll be driving in the years to come.

Cadillac Escala Concept

The Cadillac Escala - from the Spanish word for scale - is a reflection of our design evolution. Immediately apparent are the sculpted exterior lines on its large frame, giving it the appearance of gliding down the road. The many technology features inside the Escala are a perfect complement to the handcrafted interior. Inside you'll find an OLED touch screen spanning the front console, a central module control that responds to your voice, touch and gestures, and a rear seat connectivity system.

In addition to the technology and craftsmanship, the Escala offers a robust performance system featuring a powerful 4.0L V8 engine and a new RWD-centric mixed-material construction which makes it as powerful as it is beautiful.

Genesis New York Concept

Genesis's striking 'New York Concept' luxury sports sedan hints at future design direction with its expressive and refined 'Athletic Elegance,' first seen in the Vision G concept and in production form with the Genesis G90 premium luxury sedan. Acknowledging the Genesis brand's sporty and agile nature, the hybrid concept generates 245ps and 36.0 kgf.m of torque from its 2.0 T-GDi powertrain coupled with an 8-speed automatic transmission. The exterior of the New York Concept presents an elegant interpretation of a luxurious performance vehicle, defined by well-balanced proportions and refined surface treatments. Inside, the concept car combines advanced technology with absolute luxury, contrasting innovative electronics against finely-crafted materials.

Lexus Lexus LF-FC Concept

The visionary new LF-FC flagship concept vehicle, first revealed at the 2015 Tokyo Motor Show is making its Canadian debut at Toronto's Canadian International Auto show.
