Volunteers sought to help grow
Daffodil Days

The Canadian Cancer Society Halton community office is looking for site managers to assist with Daffodil Month pin sale locations.

Daffodil Month takes place every April and is one of the Canadian Cancer Society's largest fundraising campaigns.

During this time, communities across the country show their support for Canadians living with cancer by buying and wearing a daffodil pin.

The Halton community office is in need of site managers to assist with the campaign.

Duties of a site manager include dropping off and picking up supplies at one or two retail sites and communicating with volunteers.

According to the cancer society, site managers will meet interesting people, and orientation, training and support are provided.

Site managers are required to have access to a vehicle or be within walking distance of a site.

Volunteers are needed for the dates of Thursday, March 30 to Sunday, April 2, and again from April 6-9.

Daffodil pin sellers can sign up for two or three-hour shifts on these dates at both LCBOs in Georgetown and again at Freshco and Metro from April 6-9. Students can use their volunteer hours or for families, friends or groups to get out and volunteer in the community.

Money raised during Daffodil Month helps local patients and their families living with more than 100 different types of cancer.

With these donations, the Canadian Cancer Society funds life-saving research and support services, as well as other important work, so that fewer Canadians are affected by cancer.

For those interested, contact Sandy McDonald at smcdonald@ontario.cancer.ca or call the branch office at 905-845-5231.
