O Leary renews feud with Wynne

I m an Irish-Lebanese immigrant. If there was a wall around Canada I wouldn t exist, so our policies are nothing really like the U.S. We re a very inclusive society and will always remain that way, said O Leary, adding one view he appears to have in common with the prime minister.

That s our competitive advantage, he said.

He did however draw a distinction between legal and illegal immigration and seemed to suggest the latter is an issue in need of fixing. Something, unlike south of the border, data in Canada doesn t really suggest is a pervasive problem at all.

I m all for immigration, but legal immigration. I don t want people pouring over the border and I don t know who they are. We got to fix that.

O Leary also maintained his somewhat controversial stance and confirmed he has no intention of running for a seat in the House of Commons until after or if he wins the leadership race.

His opponents have publicly questioned that decision, as well as his choice not to take part in party-sanctioned debates, and that pattern remained throughout the Burlington event. His inability to speak French another common criticism of O Leary also featured prominently among his opponents on Sunday.

He suggested he didn t have time and that his efforts are better served elsewhere.

First thing s first, I have to win the leadership on May 27 and I m really busy like all the other candidates are, selling memberships. We ve got to get back those 18-35 millennials who voted for Trudeau.

I think I m going to be very competitive at that because I can fill a university auditorium in a way that no Conservative has in 20 years. So I ve got to drag them all back in. That s how we make the tent bigger.

In a break from perhaps more conventional conservative thinking, O Leary asserted morality wouldn t help in this regard, and said there is lots of room for pro-choice advocates and the LGBTQ community in his vision for the party.

I also want people to know that I m Irish Catholic, so if you re pro-life, I m OK with it. But also, if you have a different world compass you can also be in our party. Pro-choice, I embrace them as well. Our chance is wide, we do not legislate morality. We have to be much bigger if we ever going to have a chance to win this majority, he added.
