Georgetown Hospital delivers 100th baby since unit reopening

On Feb. 21, Georgetown Hospital delivered its 100th baby since the reopening of its obstetrics unit.

At around 4 p.m. that Tuesday, 26-year-old Meaghan D Entremont was experiencing a low platelet count and was induced to give birth while in her third trimester. Three hours later, Gage Liam was born at 7 lbs. 11 oz., and became the 100th baby to be delivered since the unit reopened last spring.

Mom Meaghan was not allowed to have an epidural due to her low platelet count, and was pleased to have a smooth delivery. Meaghan's other child, Rylee, 5, is very excited to be a big sister.

Dr. Ade-Conde was the delivery doctor in the room with the D Entremonts while Gage was making his entrance. He has delivered thousands of babies in his time being a doctor, but this was the first where staff knew the baby was number 100.

Although the delivery of baby 100 was reached at a slower pace than at other hospitals, the Georgetown Hospital is well on its way to becoming the fast-paced place to be for Halton Hills residents.

The staff here are phenomenal, and they provide good quality care, Dr. Ada-Conde said. There is a big opportunity here for expansion.
