

Raiders move on in playoffs

A 6-1 PUNCH

Back-to-back overtime losses seemed to have broken the resolve of the Toronto Jr. Canadiens and the Georgetown Raiders pounced on the vulnerability, rolling to a 6-1 triumph Tuesday night to advance to the third round of the post-season.

The first-place Raiders completed the sweep of the fifth-seeded Jr. Canadiens, sandwiching two routs around a couple of extra-time victories in the best-of-7 Ontario Junior Hockey League South/West Conference semifinal series.

Georgetown awaits the winner of the 2-vs.-3 Oakville-Burlington clash in the other conference semifinal, led 2-1 by the Blades heading into game four Wednesday in the Cougars den at the Appleby Ice Centre.

League-leading-scorer Jack Jacome opened the scoring in game four Tuesday with a dazzling power-play marker just over four minutes into the contest and the visitors added three more in the second period to take control, outshooting Toronto 55-31.

Jonathan Hampton tallied twice for the OJHL regular-season champs, with singles going to Ryan Miotto, Zack Dybowski and Colin Rigney.

Josh Astorino picked up the win in goal, while Arran MacDonald and Luke Beamish had two assists apiece.

The Raiders are now 8-1 in the playoffs and have yet to lose at the Alcott Arena this season.

On Saturday, April 1, Halton Hills organizations will participate in an all-day ice skating event themed Oh Canada 150, Together We Can Skate For Another 150 Years at the Mold-Master SportPlex. Here, Georgetown Skating Club members Kenda Oribhabor, Victoria Nowak, Reka Somogyi and Isabella Ward take a break from their routines.

Community ice skating event celebrates Canada 150

Ice skating is a truly Canadian activity, whether you are part of an organized club or simply enjoying gliding on a local frozen pond.

Several Halton Hills organizations are dedicated to the instruction, practice, enjoyment and advancement various forms of skating, from figure skating and hockey to ringette and speed skating.

On Saturday, April 1, Halton Hills organizations will participate in an all-day ice skating event themed Oh Canada 150, Together We Can Skate For Another 150 Years at the Mold-Master SportsPlex.

In the morning, the community is invited to an interactive experience with free demonstrations from the Halton Hurricanes, Milton Speed Skating, the North Halton Twisters and potentially the Georgetown Raiders.

The demonstrations will be followed by a free community skating session monitored by coaches.

The afternoon Ice Show (adult tickets $10, kids and seniors $5 each) will take participants through an exciting journey across Canada, with choreographed numbers and narration rich in historical anecdotes.

The Halton Hills Sports Museum will also be open to the public and will play an active role honouring the achievements of athletes and volunteers from Halton Hills.
