Georgetown cat Cinnamon passes away at age 25

The Boere family got more than full value for the nine lives of tiny calico cat Cinnamon.

She died peacefully in her sleep on Thursday at age 25, which is approximately 10 years older than the average life expectancy of similar cats.

Cinnamon weighed just five pounds and was active right up until her passing last Thursday afternoon.

The day prior she went outside and followed me around the yard as I did some gardening chores, said owner Nick Boere of Georgetown.

Boere said they don't have an exact birthdate for Cinnamon, but confirms his daughter brought the kitten home in the spring of 1992.

Boere has made attempts through social media and other avenues to try to determine whether there are or have been cats of comparable age to Cinnamon without much success.

The cat made only one visit to the veterinarian in her lifetime (aside from initial vaccinations) to get immunized for rabies.
