Local MPPs question need for new climate change agency

By Graeme Frisque
gfrisque@metroland.com

Wellington-Halton Hills MPP Ted Arnott joined others in sharing their concerns this week surrounding a new government agency, which the Wynne Liberals claim is aimed at addressing climate change.

The province announced the formation of the Ontario Climate Change Solutions Deployment Corporation (OCCSDC) earlier this year.

Arnott, who also serves as Progressive Conservative Critic to the Minister of the Environment and Climate Change, raised his concerns during question period at Queen's Park on May 15.

We all know that life just keeps getting harder for the people of Ontario under this Liberal government, and we all know of their reputation for scandal, waste, and mismanagement, said Arnott in a release. Now we learn that they're setting up the Ontario Climate Change Solutions Deployment Corp.

How is this new agency not redundant? How much is it going to cost to administer? he asked. Does it overlap with other existing ministry functions and programs? Why do we need it? Will the minister commit to this House that it will not become just another Liberal slush fund? he added.

According to a posting on the province's Public Appointments Secretariat website in February, the board of directors for the new agency includes a chair, up to two vice-chairs and up to 10 board members. Staffing details and compensation were not outlined in the announcement.

The job announcement described the role OCCSDC as follows:

The OCCSDC will play a major role in the achievement of the province's climate change objectives by significantly increasing the deployment of low-carbon technologies in Ontario.

The OCCSDC will help households, small and medium enterprises and industry reduce emissions of greenhouse gases from buildings and from the production of goods. OCCSDC will accomplish this by stimulating the development of low-carbon industries, trades and businesses in Ontario.

OCCSDC will focus on reducing market barriers to deployment of low-carbon technologies including through improved access to information, marketing, incentives, and stimulating private sector financing, added the announcement.
