COMMUNITY

Georgetown Hospital looking for patient and family advisers

KATHRYN BOYLE
kboyle@theifp.ca

Georgetown Hospital is looking for some patient and family advisers, and you could be one of them.

On Aug. 9, from 4-6 p.m., community members are invited to the hospital's open house where interested people will learn about their role in improving the patient and family experience.

The hospital is in search of patients, family members and caregivers who have received care at the hospital or one of the community service locations in the last two years. They are asking for anyone willing to share their experience and perspective to enhance patient care within Halton

Healthcare.

According to the hospital's website, patient and family advisers are to work cohesively with the hospital to plan and deliver an evaluation of health care that benefits the hospital, the families visiting, the patients and health care providers.

According to Halton Healthcare, the advisers provide a different perspective to everyday care, and each person will participate in ways that best match their interest, experience and availability.

The hospital is looking for people who are committed, good listeners, respectful of diversity, can maintain confidentiality and remain unbiased. They are also able to see beyond their personal experience and must demonstrate an interest in more than one issue.

As for time commitments, the hospital may ask for a single discussion, or refer you to become part of the Patient and Family Advisory Council. More information will be available at the open house on Aug. 9.

For more information and to apply to be an adviser, visit www.halton-healthcare.on.ca.
