Craft brewery bringing back long-forgotten brewing tradition

GRAEME FRISQUE

Spring of 2018 will mark the return of an industry not seen in Halton Hills in more than 100

The last time beer was commercially brewed in Halton Hills was when prohibition was introduced in 1916. It's about to make a return with ground officially breaking on Furnace Room Brewery next to the GO station on Elgin Street in Georgetown.

It will be the first brewery to open up shop in Halton Hills since Brain Brothers Brewing in Hornby was forced to close. The brewery didn't reopen in 1927 after prohibition was repealed and that part of the local industry died
