Plan offers glimpse of Georgetown's future

GRAEME FRISQUE

It was a packed house Wednesday evening at Christ the King Catholic Secondary School, as residents filled the cafeteria to get a first glimpse of the town's initial plans for the 1,000-acre Vision Georgetown lands.

It has been three years since the Town of Halton Hills first provided residents with three planning ideas to illicit input and comments on the provincially mandated growth plan in 2014.

Wednesday's (Sept. 20) meeting was to show residents what town planners came up with as a first draft based on that input. Following a brief presentation, the roughly 200 people in attendance were able to provide their feedback.

The Vision Georgetown expansion area is a 404-hectare (1,000-acre) area encompassing the stretch of land between 10 and 15
