Halton Hills family donates $81,000 to CASHh

EAMONN MAHER
emaheer@theifp.ca

In a generous display of appreciation for the services provided by Cancer Assistance Services Halton Hills, local couple Norman and Mary Etheridge left $81,000 in their will so that the nonprofit, not-government-funded organization can carry on with its work.

CASHh director of operations Sheila Smith expressed gratitude to the couple's daughter and son-in-law, Mary and Paul Ulrick, when they recently made the presentation.

Norman was the chief engineer overseeing the rebuilding of the Lancaster Bomber.

"A great Canadian, a great family and a wonderful friend," said Smith.

"Memories of this family live on."

Sheila Smith (centre), CASHh director of operations, accepts an $81,000 donation from Mary and Paul Ulrick, which was bequeathed to the organization by their late parents, Norman and Mary Etheridge as an expression of thanks for CASHh's personal service provided.

ago when the local branch of the Canadian Cancer Society disbanded, CASHh has grown to consist of more than 500 dedicated volunteers providing a variety of services to cancer patients free of charge.

The charitable organization offers services such as transportation for the estimated 120 new clients that CASHh supports each year.

November is Diabetes Awareness Month

Diabetes is a disease that can affect multiple organs, including the eyes, and it is a leading cause of blindness worldwide. A comprehensive eye exam can help detect diabetes. The Canadian Diabetes Association recommends annual eye exams for those already diagnosed. The eye can be affected early on in the development of diabetes but with good management of blood sugar and eye health monitoring, normal vision is usually maintained for life.
