Rev. Hyuk Cho leaving Trinity United; search for new minister begins

By: Harry Rudolfs

After nine years at the helm of Trinity United Church, Reverend Hyuk Cho is leaving to take up a new ministry. "I have many great memories while living in Acton. These are loving, caring, welcoming people. These were nine good years," he said.

Rev. Cho was most impressed with the volunteerism within his parish and the larger community. "During my nine years, three of our members were awarded Citizen of the Year, and that tells you something. These are great people that I got to work with. I learned every day from our members and their spirit of generosity. I also enjoyed working with other ministers from other faiths on community projects," he added.

Among the highlights of his tenure was last year's Christmas pageant and nativity scene. "We had about 20 children in the pageant, it was wonderful," he said. He is also delighted that one of his students from the last confirmation class, now a member of the congregation, has expressed interest in becoming a minister.

Another accomplishment, according to Cho, is the "greening of the sanctuary" renovations that included upgraded insulation, solar panels and triple pane windows.

A replacement for Rev. Cho hasn't been found yet. "This is done by committee and could take six to nine months," he said. After a brief vacation with his family, he will be taking up a new position in Vancouver. "It's time for me to move on, but I've really enjoyed my time here."
