Railroad authority dragging heels repairing unsafe crossings

GRAEME FRISQUE

Blame the railroad authorities.

That's the message from town council and staff to residents and motorists in Halton Hills frustrated by rough and unsafe railway crossings in town.

The issue was brought up during a budget committee meeting on Nov. 15, when some councillors raised concerns about the state of some of the crossings in town.

"There are two main sets of tracks going through Halton Hills, and both are owned by Canadian National. What complicates things is that the one track
