

Register now for writing course starts April 4

The Georgetown Wordsmiths (www.georgetownwordsmiths.wordpress.com), a non-profit group for people who share a passion for writing present "The next step in creative writing" in a 12-week course, April 4 to June 20. The course will be held on Thursdays, 6:45-9 p.m., at St. Alban's Church, 537 Main St., Georgetown. Register in advance by phoning Sheila Eastman, 905-826-8847 or emailing brianhenry@sympatico.ca This course will challenge you to take a step up in your writing. Over the 12 weeks of classes, you'll be asked to bring in five pieces of your writing for detailed feedback. All your pieces may be from the same work, such as a novel in progress, or they may be stand alone pieces. You bring whatever you want to work on. Besides critiquing pieces, the instructor will give short lectures at the start of each class, addressing the needs of the group. In addition to learning how to critique your own work and receiving constructive suggestions about your writing, you'll discover that the greatest benefits come from seeing how your classmates approach and critique a piece of writing and how they write and how this is a challenging course, but extremely rewarding. Instructor Brian Henry has been a book editor and creative writing teacher for more than 25 years. He teaches at Ryerson University and has led writing workshops everywhere from Boston to Buffalo.

APRIL IS CANCER AWARENESS MONTH

The different faces of Cancer

Show your support

We are all affected, directly or indirectly, by cancer at some point in our lives. Thanks to the generosity of donors and the work of its personnel, the Canadian Cancer Society is the leader in the fight against this illness.

The Canadian Cancer Society is a private, non-profit organization financed by public donations as well as by funds collected through fundraising activities. It uses every dollar raised in the most efficient way possible. That means administration costs are kept to a minimum in order to offer services to communities and to people living with cancer.

This organization was created in 1929 at the request of the Canadian medical community, which was concerned by the ignorance of the general public regarding the symptoms of cancer. In those days, people with cancer often consulted a doctor only when their illness was already at an advanced stage, which greatly reduced their chances of survival.

During the first years of this organization's existence, most of its revenue consisted of a yearly grant given by the Canadian Medical Association. For almost 40 years now, the CCS has been able to raise money around the country with Daffodil Month. By selling daffodils every spring, the fundraising campaign makes a huge difference in key areas, such as research projects, raising awareness, and community support.

Be sure to show your support for the Canadian Cancer Society by buying daffodils in April.
