Somerville elected FCM's third V-P

By LISA TALLYN
Staff Writer

Halton Regional Councillor Clark Somerville is the Federation of Canadian Municipalities' new third vice-president.

Somerville was elected to the post, which runs for a year-long term effective immediately, at FCM's Annual Conference in Vancouver Sunday, beating out Brampton Mayor Susan Fennell.

"I am truly humbled by the support I received from all areas of Canada," said Somerville, who has represented Halton Region at FCM for the last five years.

Somerville's candidacy for the V-P position had the support of Halton Hills, Milton, Oakville, Burlington and Halton Region councils. Mayor Rick Bonnette and Councillors Joan Robson, and Mike O'Leary attended the conference and cast votes.

"My role on council will be a lot busier handling this, but I know I have the support of all of Halton's mayors and councillors," said Somerville.

He added now Halton Hills and Halton Region will "have a seat with the group that is going to be doing the lobbying to the federal government."

He said the approximately $2 million the Town of Halton Hills receives annually from the Federal Gas Tax Fund and about $700,000 from the GST rebate are due to lobbying efforts by FCM. The organization's Green Municipal Fund also made it possible for the Town to secure lower cost loans to replace Acton Library and renovate and expand Georgetown Library.

Bonnette said "Clark's hard work on the FCM board over the past five years was recognized by mayors and councillors across Canada."

"He will do an outstanding job for urban and rural communities as third vice-president of FCM," said Bonnette.

"On behalf of FCM's nearly 2,000 member-municipalities across Canada, I'm very pleased to congratulate Clark Somerville on being elected as FCM's newest vice president" said Claude Dauphin, President of FCM.

The position is traditionally a stepping-stone to the organization's president's job as the third-vice president typically progresses annually up the ladder to the top post.
