Christmas light display raises $6,220 for hospital

Despite the "Great Ice Storm of 2013" knocking out their power during what is usually their busiest time for donations, the Lambert family still raised over $6,000 for the Hospital with their Christmas Lights display. Presenting a cheque for $6,220 to Laurent Thibault, past Chair of the Georgetown Hospital Foundation (far right) are Darryl, daughter Hayley and wife Kathy Lambert, who works in the hospital lab. Darryl even left the family Christmas dinner he was enjoying at a relative's house in order to rush home and power up his light show when he heard that his street had power restored at 8 p.m. on Christmas Eve! The Lambert family has raised over $45,000 in the five years they have run the light show on behalf of the Hospital and other charitable causes.
