Online resource now available for parents with children entering kindergarten

With registrations for children who will be attending kindergarten in September 2014 well underway, Halton Region, in partnership with Halton District School Board, the Halton Catholic District School Board and Ontario Early Years Centres, is pleased to offer parents the “Kindergarten: Ready, Set, Go!” online resource at www.halton-parents.ca.

Designed to help parents navigate their child’s transition to school, the online resource provides parents with a variety of information, including checklists, growth and development milestones, activities, community supports, and more.

“While the transition to school can be an exciting time for families, it can also bring about many questions and concerns from parents,” said Regional Chair Gary Carr. “This online tool provides parents with the information they need to help build their child’s skills and confidence to get started on the right foot and succeed in school.”

In Halton, according to the Our Kids Network Report Card based on Early Development Indicators, almost one in four five-year-olds is not prepared for school.

Halton Region and the partnering community organizations have pooled their expertise and resources to help change this statistic and ensure parents know what local resources and supports are available to them. It is part of the region’s ongoing commitment to support child and youth development, and work with the community to achieve the best possible health and wellbeing for all.
