Q: If I can't change the past, how can I get over it?

A: While events that occur over the course of your life cannot be changed, the meaning you give to these events and the way you choose to think about them can be changed. The perception you have of your life is not only influenced by events and circumstances you have experienced but also by the stories and intricate belief system you build around them. The stories your construct around events and situations directly impact your self-esteem, your world views and your reality. Over time, these stories have a way of becoming the "truth" from which the rest of your decisions and choices emerge. Often personal stories perpetuate emotional and behavioural patterns that cause pain and distress. Counselling can assist you with transforming the meaning you give to events and situations in your life. By doing so, you are free to see new perspectives to maximize your personal wellbeing and success. Consequently, not only can you alter the way you feel in the present but also the way you carry your past and anticipate the future.

Q: What are the different types of custody?

A:

- 1. Sole Custody - the parent with whom the children resides makes all the decisions concerning the children. The other parent has a right to see the children and a right to information about the children.
- 2. Joint Custody - the children live primarily with one parent and the other parent has a right to see the children. Both parents make major decisions about the children together.
- 3. Shared Custody - the children generally live one-half of the time with each parent often on a week on / week off schedule. Both parents make major decisions jointly. The parents should live relatively close to each other so that the children may attend the same school, activities, etc.
- 4. Split Custody - This situation occurs when the children do not live together. For instance one child may live with one parent and the other child resides with the other parent. It does not often occur. There are pros and cons to each type of parenting and you should speak to a lawyer before making any decisions.
