Alfred Angelo contest puts smile on bride's face

Alfred Angelo, America's oldest and largest family-owned and operated bridal company, together with Elizabeth's Fashions, a family-owned bridal salon with 30 years of service in Georgetown, awarded a lucky Mississauga bride with a free Alfred Angelo wedding gown.

To celebrate the success of Alfred Angelo President Paul Quentel's appearance on the hit CBS series "Undercover Boss," the company held a contest in the U.S. and Canada for one bride to receive a free wedding dress and one bridal salon to receive a free promotional event. Alfred Angelo's "Undercover Boss" episode originally aired on Nov. 1 and re-aired for Valentine's Day.

"The Undercover Boss experience showed me how emotional wedding dress shopping is for the bride, her guests and the bridal consultants," Quentel said.

"It's such an important step in the wedding process and it takes so much care and support. We wanted to say thank you in a big way and give back to our wholesale partners who make it all possible, and our brides who deserve to have their dream wedding dress."

Quentel was on-site at Elizabeth's Fashions and joined owner Elizabeth McNeilly and her daughter, manager Heather Burke, when they awarded the winning bride, Monika Murynowicz, with her free gown last Wednesday.

"We were so excited to hear that one of our customers won her dream Alfred Angelo wedding dress, and the bride is over the moon," Burke said. "It was fun to see Paul Quentel interact with the brides on Undercover Boss. We're going to ask him to work the floor now that he has all of this experience under his belt."
