Get out and vote

There's only a few days left until the June 12 provincial election.

A date that should be penned in your date books, pinned to your fridges and marked with a flag in your online e-mail calendars. It's a vitally important day that is going to determine the future of this province, the future of its residents and most importantly the future that you, the residents of Ontario, decide.

Something to think about over the next few days is the difference we can make by marking an X on a voter's ballot.

It's a simple act that takes but a few minutes of our time but has consequences that will impact our lives and those of our families for the next four years and beyond.

Sadly, provincial elections have a low voter turnout. According to Elections Ontario records, in the 1970s close to 70 per cent of eligible voters voted, but by the last election in 2011 that number dropped to 48 per cent. It's a shame that more local residents haven't bothered to act in the past and stand up for how they feel this province should function as a whole.

And yet it's these same people who have no problem complaining from the sidelines. If you don't vote, how can you complain?

Too often some may feel that their one voice can't make a difference or they don't know who to vote for. It is our collective voices that can and do bring about change, ensuring the people we want to govern our province get elected.

First and foremost, every one of us can make a difference.

And secondly, there's a wealth of information out there on your local candidates— including on pages 8-9 in this edition— so get to know them to make an informed choice.

Letters to the editor

Democracy is a privilege

Democracy allows us to vote as we choose or even to choose not to vote.

- You can review the platforms/policies and character of the candidates and their parties, consider the future and vote, even if your choice is amongst the least bad.

- You can vote on the issues and forward your views to your party of choice.

- You can vote for a woman or a man, which was not possible a mere 100 years ago.

- You have party choices, and can even start your own. No one makes you vote for a certain criteria.

- You are even free to poke fun at our politicians, be angry with them and protest without fear of reprisal.

These are exceptional and envied rights around the world— we are truly privileged.

Democracy is a fragile institution and we see it attacked daily in the news.

It is new in history and to humankind.

It can easily be extinguished if not defended.

This right to choose was won through protest and human sacrifice and needs to be continuously re-affirmed.

We can do this through the simple act of voting.

History shows us that the fewer people who vote, the more strength is given to radical and activist agendas— it becomes difficult to oust undesirable leadership.

When you vote you deny others their ability to dictate our future. You prevent our rights from being cast away to others.

Your vote is important, your attendance at the polls will help ensure your children's and grandchildren's right to choose— even if, in your opinion, the choices are less than desirable.

I for one, choose to vote.

Heat can kill

Maybe you could post a reminder to people how leaving a dog or a child in a hot car can be deadly.

Today, while waiting in the Canadian Tire parking lot, some older lady left her dog in her car while she went shopping.

We had parked next to the other car. I noticed the dog in the back seat and tapped on the window to see if the dog was responsive. Fortunately it was, but it was showing signs of stress. While I was looking for something to bust her window out, she came back. I took a picture of her, her licence plate and her dog. The car was a black SUV type and the dog a black lab.
