Security doesn't have to be boring

Very few necessity items add beauty to the home like 'entry door hardware' can. Due to advancements in electronic deadbolt locks, upgrading today can give you a double-dose of value. Some of the most decorative deadbolt options are certified Grade 1 security, the highest residential rating.

Are you remodelling, building a new home, or updating to improve curb appeal? Take a look at the Schlage website, a leading name in door hardware, for all the designer-chic combinations of deadbolts, handlesets, knobs, and levers for both inside and outside the house. In the Design Guides section of schlage.com, you will see a dazzling selection of styles, colours, finishes, and security features, plus an illustration of how they might look on certain doors and in various rooms. Just as you choose faucets, light fixtures, switch plates and vent covers to match your interior décor, it is also important to harmonize your door hardware.

If maximum security is your mission, take time to assess the benefits and beauty of the newest electronic Touchscreen Deadbolt and its cousin the Keypad Deadbolt with finishes in satin nickel, or aged bronze.

By simply entering a code you can lock and unlock, dispensing with keys altogether. Fully-loaded features of the Touchscreen Deadbolt include a built-in alarm, a frame reinforcer plate for maximum kick-in resistance, an auto-lock option, and a warning alert for low batteries. When the lock is connected to a Z-wave enabled Home Automation System you can sync other Z-wave devices like controls for lights, heating/cooling and video cameras, and operate them from web connected devices like cell phones and tablets.
