

Summer concert series marks its sixth year

In its sixth summer, three musical soirees are being offered at the concert salon of 157 Main St., in Old Downtown Georgetown.

Each evening is complete with music followed by light summer receptions, a great way to spend your warm summer Tuesday evenings.

The program for the concerts this summer varies dramatically, including piano solos and duo works for voice/violin and piano.

Concert No. 1 on July 29 will feature German violinist Annette-Barbara Vogel in a rare arrangement of Rachmaninoff's Sonata, originally written for cello and piano.

Rachmaninoff specialist Ron Greidanus will weave his way through the intricate piano textures for which this mighty Russian is known.

Concert No. 2 on Aug. 5 will showcase Georgetown's own Thomas Dobrovich who placed second at the Canadian Music Competition in Quebec city this past June in the 19 year old and under age category, and also placed first in the "Symphony on the Bay" Concerto competition.

Together with the 'Gredonian' Symphony orchestra, Maestro Dobrovich will enchant you in a deep dark rendition of Rachmaninoff's swirling yet melodic Piano Concerto No. 2 in C minor.

Works of Chopin and Beethoven will also be played at this concert. The closing concert of the summer series on Aug. 12 will feature another local talent who has gone on to do great things.

Matthew Pope, currently completing his Masters in Music Performance at the Western University, will be performing works of Mozart and Faure. Ukrainian Mezzo Soprano Viera Zmiyivsky will also be featured in eight Songs of Rachmaninoff.

Tickets are $30 each. They are on sale at Foodstuffs in Old Downtown Georgetown 89 Main Street South. All concerts will begin at 8 p.m.
