

Ready to roll

Chevrolet has announced the 2015 City Express cargo van, the company's first entry into the small van segment, will offer an EPA-estimated (US) 24 mpg city and (US) 26 mpg highway, resulting in (US) 25 mpg combined. The vehicle's 2.0-litre dual-overhead cam inline-four-cylinder engine matched to a continuously variable transmission allows the vehicle to achieve greater efficiency on the road, especially when driving in the city. All types of businesses – from florists to food delivery – will benefit from Chevrolet's service and support, including two-year/24,000-mile (whichever comes first) standard maintenance that helps businesses keep their vehicles in shape and on the job.
