Georgetown's Shel Lawr took part in a tribute to Canada's veterans before the NHL game Saturday night between the host Toronto Maple Leafs and the New York Rangers. Pictured at right is national anthem singer 2nd Lt. Scott Newlands. Lawr, 92, was a private and truck driver with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps who served in Belgium, France, Holland and Germany.

We remember

Large crowds attended the Remembrance services held in Acton, Georgetown and Glen Williams on the weekend as well as on Nov 11. On Tuesday, local resident Tom Pettingill (left) put on the same British Royal Navy uniform he wore during the Second World War and the former sub-Lt. Engineer was resplendent during the ceremony held at Georgetown's Remembrance Park on Tuesday morning. The 90-year-old served in the North Atlantic Ocean and Mediterranean Sea in many different vessels, such as destroyers, cruisers and repair ships. He emigrated here in 1955 to work on high-tech aircraft with Avro Canada. "Nowadays, (WWII veterans) like us are becoming scarce, so I've worn this the past few years. I've got to be careful with it though. I first wore it 70 years ago."
