Police warn: Stop for school buses

Police are on the lookout for drivers who don't stop for school buses. During the month of November, police in Milton and Halton Hills will be targeting drivers who fail to stop for school buses as required.

The Highway Traffic Act requires that all drivers, when approaching a school bus with flashing lights, shall stop and not proceed until the flashing lights have been turned off. When approaching a school bus with flashing lights from the front, drivers must stop before reaching the bus; from the rear, drivers must stop at least 20 metres before reaching the bus. Drivers who don't stop face a fine of $490 plus six demerit points. Subsequent violations can result in fines ranging from $1,000 to $4,000 and possible imprisonment.

Police have already received several complaints about offenders since Sept. and will have zero tolerance when handing out tickets.
