World-renowned local artist featured at new Red Door Gallery

Georgetown artist Barbara Ariss-Stroh-Wasser, who has had gallery exhibits around the world, will be featured at the Red Door Gallery's sneak peek at the Georgetown Legion this Saturday.

It might be just a coincidence that Ariss-Stroh-Wasser celebrates her birthday on the day of the pre-opening celebration of Georgetown's Red Door Gallery. Both her work and the new community gallery will take you by surprise as they are both unexpected and wonderful, says Beatrice Sharkey of the Halton Hills Cultural Roundtable.

Ariss-Stroh-Wasser says she is excited about "stepping forward" with her solo exhibit "Imagination" into the brand new gallery space housed in the Georgetown Legion building. This new Gallery is a joint venture led by the Legion in partnership with local visual artists, the Downtown Georgetown BIA, and the Halton Hills Cultural Roundtable.

The collaborators received $132,000 over one year from the Ontario Trillium Foundation to establish the Red Door Gallery, a visual arts hub in Georgetown, by renovating an underused section of the Legion.

The gallery will provide visual artists of Halton Hills with a space to display and sell their creations, offer classes and mentorship programs, and provide meeting space for the whole community. Washrooms will also be upgraded.

The public are invited to come for a sneak peek at the space and to share the opening on Saturday, Dec. 6, from 2-5 p.m. The exhibit then continues Thursdays through Sundays until Dec. 21 and Jan. 3-11.

There will be something for everyone: exciting art work on the walls to enjoy or purchase, framed local photo collages, affordable gift items and a new space that is available to rent for your business meetings, small event, course or show.
