Eradicating Poverty in Canada is an important message for IFP publisher

"No Canadian child should experience what my boyhood friend, who was the subject of the speech, experienced," said Robbins. "I haven't seen Wayne since I was a teenager, but it still offends me that he had the childhood he had in our country. I hope others will share that same outrage."

Well-rehearsed as a public speaker and writer— with a lengthy career in the media including posts as journalist and editor— Robbins said public speaking "kind of goes with the job."

He often shares his own personal experiences with his audiences, and has learned that people respond to stories.

This is his first award in speechwriting.
