More sizzle, less stains

(NC) The trend towards outdoor entertaining and extended living spaces has led to the popularity of the built-in BBQ centre. They're the permanent structures that create the feel of an outdoor kitchen and make summer entertaining easy and enjoyable.

The beauty and permanence of these hardscape stone, concrete or brick areas have become the focal point of backyards across Canada. Unfortunately, these outdoor kitchens also come with a smudgy reality—they can accumulate grease and stains unlike any other home appliance. Also, because they are outdoors, they are often subject to harsh weather conditions.

As a result, looking at the state of built-in BBQ centres after a few years can often be a tough site to bear. The grease stains, dirt, grime, general wear and tear, and the effects of the elements can cause pavers to lose some of their original lustre. It is important to protect your investment as the maintenance of these structures can add value to your home when it comes time to sell.

The good news is that the latest technological development in stain removal and paver protection allows you to freshen up and restore the beauty of your built-BBQ centre as well as avoid prematurely aging of your hardscape and preserve it for years.

According to the experts at Techniseal, the leading manufacturer of treatment products for the concrete paver industry, the cleaning and sealing of pavers is typically a three-step process.

The first step is the removal of obvious stains with the appropriate spot cleaners. Not all stains require the same product. For example, Techniseal has designed specific removers for rust, rubber, paint, oil and grease stains.

Step two of the process is to even the appearance of the entire surface after spot cleaning. For this step the HD Paver Prep is recommended. This effective cleaner is ideal for removing general grime and dirt as well as efflorescence, the whitish residue that surfaces not long after pavers are installed.
