81% failure rate in latest truck inspection blitz

Halton Regional Police conducted commercial vehicle inspections in North Halton last week and pulled several vehicles off the road, resulting in dozens of Highway Traffic Act charges laid.

Mold-Masters SportsPlex was the site of Thursday's inspection, with HRPS officers scoping out Guelph St. looking for suspect vehicles to pull over for a safety check.

It can take 30-40 minutes to thoroughly examine a large-size truck and after several hours, members of the HRPS Commercial Motor Vehicles Unit inspected 21 vehicles, took 17 of them out of service and laid 66 charges in total.

On Friday at the Milton Sports Centre on Derry Rd., 25 vehicles were checked, 17 pulled out of service and 83 charges were laid.

HRPS Sgt. Paul Rudall said that due to persistent complaints of dangerous-looking vehicles from the public, the Towns of Halton Hills and Milton have each purchased two portable weigh scales for the Commercial Motor Vehicles Unit to be in operation shortly for future inspections.

Constables Jeff Sandifer (left) and Scott Oldfield didn't give a passing grade to a cube van driver whose right rear dual tires had one flat and another with several bulges on its outside wall, indicating that it was close to blowing out.
