Classics Against Cancer is a Father's Day tradition

It's become a tradition in Georgetown for classic car fans. Classics against Cancer hosts their annual Father's Day Show in Cedarvale Park, situated on the banks of the Silver Creek. After a long winter, vintage car and truck enthusiasts love to get their motor running and shine up the chariot for a day of fun. Classics against Cancer has been the unofficial "doorway to summer" for car fans.

Classics against Cancer was initiated in 1988 by local businessman, Neil Young along with a dozen of his friends. The idea was to combine a classical concert with a car show as a backdrop to the music and park setting. The show returned in 1989 to become a yearly attraction for car fans. It was a hot from the start with the inaugural event drawing such choice vehicles such as a Model J Duesenberg and two vintage Ferraris

The 2014 Classics Against Cancer show and fundraiser generated $18,000 for the Childhood Cancer Campaign at Sick Kids Hospital in Toronto and the organizing committee for the CAC hopes to surpass that total this Sunday. From left are CAC vice chair Jamie Watt, master of ceremonies Dan Wagstaffe and chairman Chris Crane. Behind them are a 2010 Mustang GT and a 2000 Plymouth Prowler, both of which will be part of the show.
