CHICO'S COOKS UP $1,000 FOR JUMPSTART: For the past 10 years, Wayne Coulson, owner/operator of Chico's Barbeque, has donated $1,000 annually to the local chapter of the Canadian Tire Jumpstart program. An avid sports fan, Coulson stepped in to support Jumpstart when the program was in its infancy a decade ago and children were at risk of being turned away from participation in organized recreational activities in Halton Hills due to a lack of funding. "(Coulson's) consistent, annual fundraiser and support has shown what a huge difference a small barbecue business can make by supporting children, who otherwise would not be able to play an organized sport," the local Jumpstart committee stated in a press release. Chico's BBQ ambassadors (from left) Kiki Izzard, Zana Zahreddine and Emily Richards, recently presented Anne McClenaghan right, chair of the local chapter of Jumpstart, with a $1,000 cheque for its annual donation to the youth sports program.

storytelling with a purpose.

With a few keystrokes you can sample thousands of opinions, afloat in a sea of information. But as the volume increases, the accuracy and reliability of professional journalism is essential. Gathering and sorting the facts, weighing and interpreting events, and following the story from beginning to end is more important than ever.
